Community

Definitions:

A group of people living in the same place or having a particular characteristic in common.

A feeling of fellowship with others, as a result of sharing common attitudes, interests and goals.

A community is a social unit of any size which can gather physically or virtually that shares common values.

Our Monthly Newsletter Theme For August – Community

How do you create community where you live & work? What makes for a successful, inclusive community? An online community is a virtual community whose members interact with each other via the Internet. Online communities require membership. An online community can act as an information system where members can post, comment on discussions, give advice or collaborate. Online communities have become a way for people to interact, who have either known each other in real life or met online. The most common forms people communicate through are chat rooms, forums, email lists or discussion boards. Most people now rely on social networking sites to communicate with one another. People also join online communities through video games, blogs & virtual worlds.

Community is shifting as we embrace the internet technology, which is changing how we create & participate in communities. Most notably Facebook has the largest appeal to mostly the 30 something & below, but also is now blurring age participation. The smart phone messaging adds to creating community where you can share your whereabouts with friends. Pinterest, which is another online community, made up of mostly women, (but that is shifting), is a pin board of pictures ranging from home décor, technology, fashion, gardening, food travel & much more.

When you want to find information where do you turn to? For me it is the online community. For health issues either with people or pets it's Earthclinic.com, webmd.com & others. For news, it is all online, as I never read print news papers anymore. For weather, I turn to weather.com or weather.gov. When shopping online, I read the online reviews & comments, which help govern my decisions.

It seems that the online community has taken over as we turn to the internet for information. But what about our immediate physical community, how are we connected to our local community? By participating & reaching out, volunteering & getting involved with civic, social & personal actions, we can enhance the community we live in. As our online community grows, we need to remember to interact with our physical community that surrounds us. Think globally & act locally needs to include, "& in person". I know I spend an enormous amount of my daily schedule online, often with very little in person interaction. Emails, texting, researching online, reading online, & working online, are more common than interacting with people in person. I am attempting to spend more time in the flesh with people. Good thing I have a standard poodle & we live in a live/work building with my husband, (even though we text each other throughout our day), otherwise I would live as a hermit!

Thank you for reading our newsletter. – Dianne McKenzie, Cecile Bodman, Aeowyn and our content contributors.

Feng Shui Your Car

Q: Between commuting, taking the kids to school, and errands I practically live in my car. Can I apply Feng Shui to my car the same as to my house?

A: Your car connects you to the community around you as you drive around handling the details of your life. However, if your car is out of Feng Shui balance it can make you and your passengers feel out of balance, too. Here are five ways to Feng Shui your car:

1. Clear the Clutter. Remove the clutter and you'll move forward in your life and career. Clear out those Styrofoam cups and plastic bottles that are rolling around on the floor, the stale gummy bears, and the fast food wrappers. Be sure to check the glove box, trunk, and all those drink holders where stuff accumulates. Make it a practice to treat your vehicle like a room, rather than a moving trash can.

2. Wash Your Car. Wash your car regularly, either by hand or at the car wash, and between washes keep the windows clean. Quickly repair problems like a chipped windshield or squeaky wipers. In Feng Shui windows represent eyes, so if you're driving with filmy, cracked, or broken windows your vision toward the future is equally cloudy.

3. Drink Water. The Water Element represents a smooth and flowing experience while you drive, so drinking water may even help you smoothly cope with traffic and avoid road rage. This is especially important if you use a Bluetooth in your car because it creates an electromagnetic field around you.

4. Play Music. Choose the music for your car that fits the mood of your trip: try classical music when you need to relax and upbeat music if you need to stay alert, but skip the news if you've had a hard day at work.

5. Choose the Right Color: In Feng Shui, each color has specific attributes, so when it's time to get a new car, choose the color that matches your personality or fills a need in your life:

- Red or Orange (Fire Element) represents wealth and power.
- Brown, beige, or yellow (Earth Element) represents grounding and balance.
- White or metallic (Metal Element) represents strength and focus.
- Blue or black (Water Element) represents relaxation and comfort.
- Green or teal (Wood Element) represents growth and expansion.

Creating Clarity

by Lainie Grimmer

Creating Community

As I write this article, my house is a beehive of activity: Two men are installing telephone lines, another is installing window shades, an electrician is rewiring lighting, landscapers are repairing the watering system, and the plumber is on his way. I'm a part of a busy, buzzy community!

While it might seem odd to think of a group of repairmen, and me, as a community, we are. Each is contributing his knowledge and skills to support my vision of turning this house into a comfortable home. That's one definition of community: People coming together to support a vision or goal. Communities are also groups of people who share common characteristics or interests. They can be social, religious and occupational. They are small: a family. And large: the family of mankind. Some communities last for years, while others, like my beehive, will scatter at the end of a day.

True communities both support us and offer us the opportunity to support others. As a life coach I've observed that my clients move toward their goals more quickly if they have a network, large or small, offering encouragement. Change isn't always easy; It's easier if you have support along the way.

If you find you don't have a troupe to cheer you toward a goal, or you're longing to share an interest or hobby, create one! You can create the community you need by following these easy steps:

1. Identify Begin by asking: What is it I want and need? What is the focus of my new community? Who will be interested, willing to lend a hand or an ear, lead a discussion, or paint a wall?
2. Organize Where will we meet? When? How long will the meeting last? What should the members of the group bring or have available?

Once you know the focus of your soon-to-be community and have an idea of how you'd like to set it up,

3. Ask For some asking is easy. For others, it's a challenge. For all, remembering why this new community is important to you will help you invite others to join the adventure.
4. Come Together Whether it's a conference call, a group email, or meeting at a local coffee shop, bring your group together. Describe your vision, then open yourself to hearing others' thoughts on how the group can support you, and each other. Community, after all, is about giving and receiving.

The doorbell is ringing, the plumber has arrived. I'm off to welcome the newest member of my community!

Your Inner Rock Star by Patty Walters

Community is for Thriving

Community exists where groups of people come together – it can be physical location, political beliefs, spiritual beliefs, like-minded people, commonalities of all types. It can be physical gatherings or virtual groups. Community is a natural way of organizing. Community takes intention, focus and continuous clarity to grow and thrive. It is how we as humans were meant to live.

After coming out to New Mexico 4 years ago in October, I did not have any community to speak of. A new feeling for me for sure. Then I got busy networking, saying 'yes' to events that sounded interesting, going to various things I got invited to.

Now, 4 years later, I have several communities I'm involved in ... and it feels really good. From my spiritual community, to several business networking communities, to other communities I am part of for personal and professional reasons. This feels really good!

It feels really great to know that people I am connected to are there when I want to tap in, or someone wants to tap into me...we are there for each other. If I have a problem or a need to know an answer, it's important to have the community/communities/ or tribe, as it is sometimes referred to, to call on.

And your community (and communities) are essential when growing your business. This is a huge source for referrals and support and caring compassion when the going gets tough. Communities are for support in trying family times – with spouses, children, and aging parents. They are worth the effort to volunteer your time in, cultivate relationships, and for developing your authentic voice in. The perfect fit communities support you to be fully yourself.

Ask yourself, what are 5-10 characteristics of your perfect community? How do you know when it's a good fit for you?

It's important to develop your community, the way that's perfect for you. And that we support others in our efforts to find ways to thrive in our life journey on this planet. Community plays a critical role in thriving.

Have fun building community!

Building Your Community Through Relationships by Jan Stringer

Does any of this resonate with you?

- I want to have a heart-centered business, and I seem to be unable to get to the next level.
- I have customers who tell me I have a great offering, however, I don't feel comfortable marketing my own work.
- I don't think I'm good at selling – I feel like I'm being pushy and I should be giving it away.
- I get flooded with ideas, and I often don't know what to do next.
- I feel tongue-tied talking about money and asking to be paid what I am worth.

Too many traditional marketing and business advisers say, 'To book clients you have to do it my way – you have to be manipulative and pushy' and then they teach you what they learned from someone else.

Nothing could be further from the truth or more inauthentic!

I'm Jan Stringer, and I believe that successful selling is a natural result of successful marketing, and my definition of marketing is – "Building Relationship"!

The catch is "building relationship" starts with me.

And that's where most people get stuck!

I can't start a "sales" conversation with you, and ask you for money, until I have a marketing conversation and built relationship by talking enough with you to know if I can truly help you.

And, here's the real catch, no matter what, I will not be comfortable or successful in selling my product or service to you if I have not built relationship with myself enough to have beliefs that are in alignment with selling and marketing my business.

Supporting Community

"Our true destiny...is a world built from the bottom up by competent citizens living in solid communities, engaged in and by their places." David W. Orr

Part of the beauty of living in community is shared connection. We form these connections in many ways, volunteering for causes we are passionate about is one. When we find such a cause, we happily make accommodations to support it, including donating time and money.

Participating in cause marketing efforts is a relatively easy way to support a charity, and studies show that 86% of us are willing to switch brands to purchase an item if it benefits something we hold dear. This can be a painless method, since often the products are things we are already purchasing.

Shaklee has an amazing fundraising program for nonprofits that is completely free for any group with 501c3 status to participate in. They get a free website to direct supporters to and purchases made through the site benefit the group.

Shaklee's product catalog includes over 300 effective products that are all natural, non GMO and beyond organic standards in purity. We do not test on animals. Our product lines include supplementation, weight loss, skincare, children's health and fabulous and cost effective green cleaning solutions.

Please consider switching brands to support the groups below, or contact me to discuss the possibilities for your favorite nonprofit. Blessings and thanks!!

The Biggest Misconception about Mortgages? The Down Payment

I can't tell you how often I hear some version of this statement: I want to buy a home but my (friend/cousin/neighbor) says I have to have 20 percent for a down payment. Hold that thought and let's see how true it is.

First, a quick look at the current market. Last year may have been when home prices hit bottom and interest rates hit their all-time lows, but sellers are still pricing their houses to sell and we are still very close to those historic low rates. But they're not likely to stay low. 4 respected sources agree that by the 4th quarter of 2015 mortgage rates will rise to the high 4's and mid 5's. Their projections? Freddie Mac 5.2 percent.¹ Fannie Mae 4.7 percent.² The Mortgage Bankers Association 5.1 percent.³ The National Association of Realtors 5.4 percent.⁴ If you have been considering a refinance, it may make sense to review your current mortgages with your mortgage banker. You may find a low cost loan and lower your rate one more time, or shorten the maturity to 10, 15, or 20 years with Annual Percentage Rates in the 3's and 4's!

Now, about those down payments. Zelman and Associates did an interesting survey recently.⁵ They asked participants if a minimum 15 percent down payment was required to buy a home. Overall, 39 percent said yes. 38 percent of 25-29 year olds said yes. And 42 percent of 30-34 year olds said yes. Considering that those in their 20's and 30's are prime first time homebuyers, it's important to address this perception.

Can you buy without 20 percent - or even 15 percent - down? Read on.

100 Percent Financing: If you're a Veteran, VA loans are available. If your home is located in a defined rural area, including some parts of Santa Fe County, USDA Rural Home loans are available. To determine if your home qualifies, go to: <http://eligibility.sc.egov.usda.gov/eligibility/welcomeaction.do>.

96.5 Percent Financing: FHA loans are great for low down payment purchases. Family gift money is allowed for the down payment, too.

95 Percent Conventional loans (Under $417,000): These loans are available for those wishing to avoid the higher FHA mortgage insurance payments. With the current low interest rates, FHA and 5 percent down loans make incredible sense for those with less saved up for their initial down payments.

90 Percent Loans: Available for JUMBO loans (over $417,000) for Primary residence purchases, and for Second homes under $417,000.

80 Percent/10 Percent Primary Home Loans: This option is available for those who wish to avoid private mortgage insurance by financing an 80 percent 1st mortgage combined with a 10 percent 2nd mortgage. Fixed or variable rate HELOCs (Home Equity Lines of Credit) are available for the 10 percent 2nd.

80 Percent Loans: This is the normal starting point for Investment property home loans under $417,000.

I often help buyers identify sources of down payment money that they may have overlooked. They may be able to borrow from their own 401k or brokerage account, or take equity from other properties they own by using a Line of Credit.

I hope you're convinced: You don't need 20 percent down to buy a home. Banks are lending and this continues to be a great time to buy.

Creating a New Urbanist Community in Aldea

Aldea is a new urbanist village, with a central civic plaza surrounded by traditional neighborhoods of multiple housing types & miles of walking trails. New urbanism provides a unique mix of commercial properties, live/work lofts (apartments over storefronts), townhouses, patio homes, & single family homes with yards. Diverse, walkable neighborhoods surrounding a mixed-use commercial core, are what distinguishes new urbanism from other development styles.

Aldea de Santa Fe consists of 345 acres, with 205 acres of perpetual open space, master plan zoning for 476 dwellings units, 185,000 square feet of retail/commercial, and one institutional site.

New urbanists have been taking part in urban redevelopment and are part of the movement to create communities by designing cities, towns and villages livable. Projects include neighborhood plans, loft redevelopment, transit villages, and a revival of aging main streets. Real estate investors are turning away from developing urban sprawl, as they realize that there is a tremendous market demand for real community neighborhoods, for lively cities, and for regions of protected open space.

Comet Studios has been involved with creating communities since 1980 where we were located in the northern California coastal village, The Sea Ranch. In 2000 Comet Studios became involved with the development of Aldea de Santa Fe, a new urbanist community 10 minutes from downtown Santa Fe. John Halley, catalyst, visionary, dream maker, real estate developer and community planner, designed the live work commercial core prototypes around the Aldea Plaza.

Comet Studios specializes in providing environmentally conscious planning, design & development services for a wide variety of sustainable project types – from small cabins to custom homes, custom estates, mixed-use commercial projects, land development projects, real estate developments and eco-communities.

Deals of the Decade:

I specialize in helping clients increase their wealth through Real Estate. I invest in real estate and have rental properties that create cash flow. I always find "deals of the decade" which are three bedroom, two bath, two car garage in great school districts you can rent for more than the mortgage.

All are priced under the market and could be rented for the mortgage payment and more. I may be able to write agreements on many of the homes with the owner paying the down payments and/or most of the closing costs. I would love to empower you to make educated decisions on your investments. Interest rates are still at historic lows!

We invite you to join our alpine eco-resort community, where you and your family can enjoy one of the most coveted lifestyles available in the Rocky Mountains. We are experiencing a growing interest in the phase one properties offered at Kachina Mountain Lodge, GaiaQuest's alpine eco-community located in Taos Ski Valley, New Mexico. Property sales at Taos Ski Valley have multiplied since December, when New York hedge fund founder Louis Bacon said he was buying the ski area from a family that has owned it for decades. 11 homes and eight plots of land have changed hands since Dec. 13, compared with two homes and one piece of land in the same period a year earlier.

A E O W Y N's Dog Treats

Apple Sauce Carrot Treats

Ingredients:

- 1 ½ cups apple sauce
- 4 large grated carrot = 2 cups
- ¼ cup of chicken broth
- 2 cup rolled oats, uncooked
- 2 cups rice flour (or you can use any flour)
- ½ cup wheat germ
- ¼ cup oat bran
- ¼ cup flax seeds
- ¼ cup chopped parsley
- 1 TBLS Cinnamon

*Parchment paper for rolling out the dough

- *Pizza cutter
- Ruler for cutting straight lines

Method:

1. Preheat oven to 350° F.
2. Mix the apple sauce, grated carrots & parsley.
3. Mix dry ingredients in a large bowl. Slowly stir in small amount of the chicken broth, as needed. The apple sauce maybe enough.
4. Mix all ingredients until thoroughly combined, then mix with hands. Add more liquid or flour, if needed. Divide into 4 balls.

Roll out dough ball between parchment paper, 1/8" consistent thickness in rectangular shape to fit baking sheet. Discard top parchment paper & save for next baking tray. Use pizza cutter to cut the dough into 1/2" parallel strips. This technique makes the process super fast. Transfer rectangular shaped dough with the bottom parchment paper to baking sheet. Don't move the strips—leave them in place on the parchment paper and place on baking sheet.

Bake 45-50 minutes, slightly brown, not burnt. Remove from oven, remove parchment paper and cool. This recipe uses 4 baking sheet/trays. These treats are a crunchy, thin treat & are very tasty. Recipe makes enough treats to fill a 3 quart storage container. Keep small amount of treats at room temperature in an airtight container for 2 weeks & the remaining in the refrigerator up to 4 weeks.

Aeowyn snoopervises the whole process of making her dog treats. She sits patiently waiting her turn to taste test the new treat recipe. So far she has never rejected a recipe. Her favorite treat is the one she just ate.
